Interpretation of Site	Heritage Inventory Interpretation: Sub-surface remains may be part of the Morwell Bridge settlement and associated with structures from within the Smith family land boundaries (parish plan c 1890s). A row of mature poplars lies 26 m to the south of the deposit, which suggests that the area may have originally featured a house.

History

Heritage Inventory History of Site: Further historical research of the site is required. An issue of the Morwell Historical Society News claims that Thomas Thompson Gov Surveyor, drew up the plan for a small township at Morwell River on the east bank, south of Old Melbourne Rd in 1861 (1962:4). A c1890s parish plan also shows a small settled area here. The site is probably associated with this township.
