A most compact triple-fronted Edwardian asymmetrically brick house. It has a high hip roof; with the centre bay set forward as a gable. The hip descends break-pitch over verandahs in the angle on each side. At left, this is at the side and extends back to a side gable roof. The upper gable is timbered roughcast and projects on timber brackets. Beneath is a canted bay window, with a scale pattern pressed metal curved hood supported by curved quadrant timber brackets. Verandahs have shallow curved rail valances on Doric timber posts. That at left has an oculus window. There are flat render bands at cill, base level and over the bay. There is a segmental head over the window pairs and two metal hoods over the right hand side windows. Next to these, is an early slotted side fence. There are terra-cotta pots to the front chimney.
