Physical Description 1

Although some alterations have occurred (slate roof of No.123 replaced, cast iron balconies and ground floor verandah friezes removed) this red brick, plaster trimmed pair of houses is in good condition. The simple rectangular shapes of the building are relieved by the plaster quoin work, and the plaster architraves to the windows. The upper windows of the projecting bays have some ornate plaster hoods supported on consoles. This pair of houses is closely related in design and materials to 127 Raglan Street, and could have been designed by the same architect.
