Veterans Description for Public

Prisoner of War camps were set up at Mount Disappointment, during the later part of the Second World War to house alien internees and, later, Italian prisoners of war. At the end of the war, the camps were abandoned and all but one of the main huts were removed from the No.1 camp. The site resembles a large cleared area of about five acres, with evidence of buildings, the remains of a tennis court and cricket pitch. The site is now used as a picnic ground.
