Further historical documentary evidence required.

Interpretation of Site	Well was associated with artefact scatters observed during the original time of recording (2003) dating from 1850s to 1860s. Well was originally domed. The original informant believed a farm house once existed to the north of the well. Now council land.
Archaeological Significance	Site potentially has subsurface archaeological deposits associated with the well such as artefacts and/or building remains.
Historical Significance	Well is made with handmade wire cut bricks with remnants of cement render. Example of 19th Century construction.
