Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

HOTEL IS A SIGNIFICANT SITE IN TERMS OF LOCAL HISTORY, ESPECIALLY IN TERMS OF EARLY EUROPEAN SETTLEMENT, TRAVEL AND CULTURAL LIFE OF THE AREA. IT IS ADJACENT TO TWO HERITAGE VIC SITES.

The area is of major historical significance in terms of early European settlement and as early as 1837 was part of the sheep run of Edward Willis.

The 1985 Heidelberg Conservation Study - historical riverland landscape assessment by loader and Bayley (McBriar 1985), identifies the site of Edward Willis' hut as just east of the Old Lower Plenty Bridge and it is likely it is located within the proposed development site. It is considered of major historical significance as one of the earliest recorded sites of European settlement near Melbourne and is listed in the 1841 census as a wattle and daub hut with ten inhabitants.

Interpretation of Site

The 1990 archaeological survey of Lower Plenty River Valley (Weaver, 1990) advocated the collective significance of the individual sites of the Lower Plenty Valley in terms of early European heritage and the importance of further investigation and identification of the sites. It recommended the continuation of McBriar's work including examination of areas for substructure archaeological remains.

The site of the Old Lower Plenty River Hotel and Toll Shed is immediately adjacent to the proposed development and can easily be identified by old photos and comparison with the poplar trees and red river gum still growing near the site and is again an important local heritage site.
