Statement of Significance

Last updated on - April 27, 2006

Site of moderate scientific significance as it is likely to contain several features potentially dateable artefacts from the earliest period of European settlement in the area. It is assessed as having local cultural heritage significance.

Interpretation of Site	Former house site. House likely dated to the mid-nineteenth century. Occupied until at least the 1940s. Possibly a weatherboard house with brick chimney (scatter of Northcote bricks noted). Fragments of glass and other domestic rubbish.
