History

J Ward was built between 1860 and 63 as the Ararat Gaol, to a design based on the Pentonville concept by the Public Works Department. It was run as a Gaol until 1886. In 1887, after alterations, the building was transferred the Lunacy Department and used as a special ward of the Ararat Asylum for the criminal insane. J Ward, as it became known, was decommissioned in 1989.

Three executions occurred at the site:

15 August 1870: Andrew Vere

25 September 1883: Robert Francis Burns

6 June 1884: Henry Morgan

All three executed prisoners were buried within the walls of the prison in accordance to the Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864
