Physical Description 1

The original owner of this two-storey brick house was W.H.Davies [3]. The building stands on a prominent tongue of land and was designed by Ussher and Kemp to take advantage of the exposed position. Built in the form that Tibbits has identified as their 'hipped genre' [4], the second storey of the house is enveloped in the sweep of the terracotta tiled hip roof, and piercing out from it are large dormer units, tall corbelled brick chimneys and a squat octagonal turret. At ground floor level, the house has a complex interplay of bay windows, a small porch, and verandahs decorated with turned timber. It remains substantially intact and is one of the key works of the Ussher and Kemp partnership, in this hipped style.
