Statement of Significance

Last updated on - January 12, 2004

What is significant?

The former St Andrews Presbyterian Manse is located in Martin Street, Penshurst beside the Uniting Church on the southern side of the town. It is a single storey asymmetrical bluestone house built between late 1865 and early 1866. The architects were the local firm, J. M. Knight and A. Kerr. The first incumbent was the Rev. Robert Fawkner. The incumbent in the 1880s was Rev. J. Ringland Anderson, a native of Armagh, Ireland, who was active in local affairs being president of the Penshurst Band of Hope and vice president of the Mechanics' Institute committee, and treasurer of the local Rechabite Tent. The Uniting Church sold the manse about 1990. The manse is in very good condition and remains substantially intact.

How is it significant?

The former St Andrew's Manse is of historical and architectural significance to the Southern Grampians Shire.

Why is it significant?

The former St Andrew's Manse is of historical significance as the residence of one of the religious leaders of the community and of architectural significance as the work of local architects, Knight and Kerr.

Physical Conditions

The building is in very good condition

Physical Description 1

The manse is a single storey asymmetrical building with a shallow-pitched hipped roof and a verandah with a cast iron frieze. The roof is corrugated iron. The floor plan appears to be typical with its central hall and a service wing at the rear. A room projects forward on the south side and now has a multi-paned bay window, possibly dating from after the manse was sold by the Presbyterian Church. The original windows, converted to two-pane sash have been converted into twelve-paned, double-hung sashes. The walls are constructed of coursed rock-faced bluestone.
