Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

Architecturally, one of the best and the earliest surviving of the highly individual Prairie School styled R.I.E.Co. designs in Australia, allowing full vent to the school's use of traditional' forms and details: of national importance.

Historically, locally important as using a process invented by a Moonee Ponds resident and a landmark in the effects of total urbanisation in the city.

Physical Description 1

Oriental in form with its Hide-span, flared twin-gabled roof and Aztec in detail (cf Ninomaru Palace Hall, Kyoto; Shrine to the Sun Goddess, Ise), the incinerator is distinguishable as from the American 'Prairie School of domestic architecture. The unpainted cement and Marseilles pattern terracotta tiles provide natural and contrasting finishes. The characteristic overlapping gables of the roof are visible from the north end only, the workshop obscures the south end.

Mature landscaping from the period is evident.

Integrity

Alterations have occurred to the roof and recent renovations have replaced dressed with off-saw timbers, but otherwise the exterior is generally original.

Physical Description 2

Streetscape

Isolated and set back, within landscape; subject of views from Tilba Street and Park Crescent.
