Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

Architecturally, an unusual form, achieved, using common 19th century suburban materials and early 20th century (Queen Anne) details also interesting because of its presumed replication of part of Peck's ancestral home: of regional importance.

Historically, the house and writing place of H.H. Peck, a person epitomising the urban" expression of the early pastoral era of Melbourne and its suburbs and Essendon's special place as the gateway to the rich pastoral holdings of the west: of regional importance and State interest.

Physical Description 1

An asymmetrically planned, bichrome brick house with dominant foliated roof gables, return cast-iron verandah, protruding window bay, banded chimneys and an encaustic tiled verandah. A window bay has been added, under the verandah, and a gabled room extended on the west, early this century. Mature, exotic planting provides a sympathetic setting.

Integrity

The presumed picket fence has been removed and minor alterations made but the house is generally original to the last major addition (c1910).

Physical Description 2

Streetscape

Atypical in age to the surrounding houses but occupies an elevated corner site.
