Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

What is significant?

The shops with upper level residences at 112-120 Puckle Street, Moonee Ponds erected for the Wesleyan Church over a period from 1903 to 1906 to the design of the architect, George Burridge Leith.

Non-original alterations and additions to the shops are not significant.

How is it significant?

The shops with upper level residences at 112-120 Puckle Street, Moonee Ponds are historically and aesthetically important to the City of Moonee Valley.

Why is it significant?

They are historically important (Criterion A) in that they demonstrate a period of change in the life of the Puckle Street centre and the Moonee Ponds Methodist Church, the shops being ornamented in a way which is not uneccelesiastical in manner, the ribbed ornamentation being of interest in this respect and comparing with other examples of G.B. Leith's work (Criterion H), including the Camperdown Methodist Church.

They are aesthetically important also on these accounts whilst the exploitation of the Arts and Crafts idiom to create a stylistic reference to the ecclesiastical origins of the site is highly successful, imparting character to Puckle Street and shedding light on the adaptability of the Arts and Crafts ideal. (Criterion E)

Physical Description 1

A terrace of five shops with upper level residences in the Arts and Crafts mode deploying Medieval inspired ornamentation above impost level to the upper level round arched windows and pilaster terminations. The upper level facade is divided by faceted pilasters into five identical bays, the pilasters being suspended and capped in the Arts and Crafts manner. Each bay is further subdivided into two parts by a fine cement rib mould, given emphasis below impost level by the use of contrasting face brick surfaces. The lower ends of the ribs and pilasters are linked by a continuous cement band.

The condition is sound and external integrity is medium; shop fronts defaced, verandah replaced with cantilevered awning.
