Physical Description 1

Nestling behind an overgrown hedge is a two-story, unpainted stuccoed house with a two level cast iron verandah (of an ecclesiastical pattern). Pointed arches, some with incised foliated tympanums, pointed to the religious nature of this residence, whilst its high gabled asymmetrical planning underscores it. The verandah floor is tiled, whilst the enshrouding landscape is sympathetic. The residence is part of a civic complex and supported by the nearby church and court house.

The house is in good condition and has a relatively high degree of external integrity except for the front fence (presumed once to have been pickets) the trim colours and details such as a security door. A concrete masonry structure between the residence and the church is intrusive.
