Physical Description 1

The house, formerly known as Anastasia, at 55 Holmes Road is a single-storey double-fronted Victorian bichromatic brick villa on a bluestone plinth. Occupying a corner site, the asymmetrical house has two street frontages, each with a canted bay window at one end, connected by a return verandah. The hipped slate roof has decorative cast iron ridging, moulded eaves brackets, and brick chimneys with moulded cornices. The brown brick walls are articulated by banding and diaper-work of contrasting cream and red brick. There are tall rectangular windows with timber-framed double-hung sashes; those to the canted bays have round-arched heads. The return verandah has a bullnosed roof supported cast iron fluted columns, with particularly ornate cast iron lace between, and a tessellated floor.

A timber picket fence extends along both street frontages; it has stop chamfered posts and a splayed corner with a recessed gateway.
