Physical Description 1

This strip of two groups of inter-war shops is situated on the east side of High Street to the north of the Town Hall. The group at the northern end are five two-storey shops, each with a stepped parapet. The shops at 364, 366 and 368 High Street retain much of their original facade design on their upper levels, with 364 and 366 having original leadlight in the upper sashes of their windows. The shops at 370-372 High Street have been altered unsympathetically, with much of their original architectural embellishment removed or obliterated. The shop at 372 has been fitted with an unsympathetic Post Modern steel and glass awning, whilst all other shops in this group, except 370 High Street, have standard cantilevered awnings extending across their facades between their ground and first floors. All shops have had their original shopfronts removed and replaced with glazed steel frame shopfronts, except for 370 High Street, which has a shopfront that has been partially infilled, unsympathetically, with brick.

To the south of the group of two-storey shops in this strip, are a group of single-storey shops, with relatively high parapets concealing their roofs. The parapets are uniform with a pilaster at each end and a capping at their tops. There is a plain vertical motif at the centre of the top of each parapet. Cantilevered awnings extend across the shops above their shopfronts. The shopfronts are glazed and have a steel frame and are of recent origin.

The shops are opposite a group of altered two storey interwar shops that were once similar in design to Nos. 364-72, but now have been much altered.
