Physical Description 1

Viewed from Buninyong Street, this Bungalow styled house expresses much of its construction period, with its faded maroon and cream joinery colours and unpainted cement work. From the side, however, the house takes on the typical 19th century row house form, built to the street alignment and even the cementing is ruled to represent stone such as what was done last century. The garden however supports the Bungalow era with the privet hedge and (more recent) chain-wire fence. At the rear is an extensive (for the area) garage and workshop, also built in the Bungalow era.
