Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

These trees have been recognised by the National Trust of Australia (Vic) for their age and beauty, judged within the former Pakenham Shire but also have associations with the history of The Grange and its prominent role in the district late last and early this century. The trees in the drive, which are thought to over 100 years old, include eight English oaks and eight Dutch elms, and relate well to the garden and house (see The Grange). The combination of mature elms and oaks is rare.

Physical Description 1

Eight oaks (Quercus robur L.) and eight elms (Ulmus X hollandica Mill) which alternate along the drive at The Grange were then estimated by the National Trust as being up to 100 years old.

The approximate total number of similar trees around the drive and along the adjacent frontage was 30-40. The avenue trees' girths were 2.5m, the heights 20-30m and the canopies 22-25m. The National Trust noted them for their age and beauty as well as noting their contribution to the historic character of The Grange.

Physical Conditions

Two elms were missing from the avenue but the remaining trees were noted as in good condition.
