Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

Nathan's shop row, which dates from 1937, is significant to Cardinia Shire as an example of the commercial centres that developed in the shire townships this century. The row has historical significance, too, for its associations with Hugh Pound who ran his business there for many years from the 1930s. This brick shop row is a major element in the regionally significant Bunyip commercial streetscape which emanates largely from the 1920s and 1930s.

Physical Description 1

This parapeted row of brick shops (3) with recessed entrances and tiled shopfronts and cantilever awnings, appears more like the Edwardian-era or 1920s above the canopy line.

The red brick pedimented parapets of 20 and 22 allude to the Edwardian-era although the more severe stepped centre parapet is more typical of the 1920s. Only the black-tiled shopfronts are of the 1930s, with their check friezes, white ventilators, glazed doors. and metal joinery.

Physical Conditions

These shops are externally near original except for details such as the roof drainage.
