Statement of Significance

Last updated on - December 28, 2007

Archaeological evidence of the huts provides a tangible link to the early fishing activity of the area. Remains of this type are rare in Victoria especially if they are well preserved.

Interpretation of Site	The archaeological potential of the site is unconfirmed as there is no ground surface visibility to indicate buried remains. Thick vegetation obscures visibility on the ground. The archaeological potential is determined from the old photographs of the area. It is likely that domestic structures associated with fishing exist.

History

The huts may date to the 1880's fishing activity. The 1900's photograph from the State Library of Victoria indicates their condition at this time. The sites are also identified in the 1918 Department of Land Survey Plan.

This place/object may be included in the Victorian Heritage Register pursuant to the Heritage Act 2017. Check the Victorian Heritage Database, selecting 'Heritage Victoria' as the place source.
