Physical Description 1

The Strathfieldsaye Uniting Church is built in a rather utilitarian style in face red brick with cream brick pointed window heads. The gable end is simply inscribed with the name and date of the building. Brick piers are designed in the form of buttresses and the windows are paired between these. The roof is clad in the characteristic terra cotta tiles of the 1950s.

The interior contains some fittings and windows from the earlier 1874 church which were reinstated in the current church.
