Statement of Significance

Last updated on - June 4, 1999

What is significant?

The residence at 206 Clarendon Street was erected by R. Jones for J. Gray in 1856. The architect was Osgood Pritchard. The original two storeyed building comprised twelve rooms and was valued at £400. Some demolition and rebuilding was undertaken by the subsequent owners W.H.Hart in 1859 and Gray in 1862. From 1861 the building was tenanted by Louis Viesseux who operated a Ladies College. Later a Chinese importer and Tea Merchant, Lowe Kong Meng, was in residence until 1875. At this time the building was described as a brick house with fifteen rooms, laundry, stable and coach house, valued at £230. Redmond Barry later tenanted and owned these premises, where he died in 1880. From 1890 until the late 1940s the house was owned and occupied by three different medical men. The two-storey residence is designed in the Victorian Free Classical style. It is constructed of brick with stucco facing. The ground floor facade includes Doric pilasters and Ionic columns to the porch. A parapet with a decorative cornice surmounts the residence. The central grand entrance hall with square columns and double staircase dominates the interior.

How is it significant?

The residence at 206 Clarendon Street is of architectural, social and historical significance to the State of Victoria.

Why is it significant?

The residence at 206 Clarendon Street is of architectural importance for its unusual composition with corner pavilions and fine detailing to the facades. The combination of Doric pilasters and ionic columns, the fine front door and window mouldings are all notable elements. The interior is important for its grand entrance hall, staircase, marble fireplace, balcony, and remnant plasterwork and timber details. The residence is an important work of the architect Osgood Pritchard, who also designed Clarendon Terrace next door.

The residence at 206 Clarendon Street is of historical and social significance for its associations with Sir Redmond Barry, Supreme Court Judge, and first Chancellor of the University of Melbourne who tenanted the 15-roomed house with his family, and became owner/occupier in 1879. Sir Redmond Barry died in November 1880, only twelve days after the execution of Ned Kelly, over whose trial he presided. This house has also been the residence of other important citizens, including Lowe Kong Meng, a prominent importer and tea merchant. The residence is of historical importance as one of East Melbourne's earliest buildings.

Permit Exemptions

General Exemptions:

General exemptions apply to all places and objects included in the Victorian Heritage Register (VHR). General exemptions have been designed to allow everyday activities, maintenance and changes to your property, which don't harm its cultural heritage significance, to proceed without the need to obtain approvals under the Heritage Act 2017.

Places of worship: In some circumstances, you can alter a place of worship to accommodate religious practices without a permit, but you must notify the Executive Director of Heritage Victoria before you start the works or activities at least 20 business days before the works or activities are to commence.

Subdivision/consolidation: Permit exemptions exist for some subdivisions and consolidations. If the subdivision or consolidation is in accordance with a planning permit granted under Part 4 of the Planning and Environment Act 1987 and the application for the planning permit was referred to the Executive Director of Heritage Victoria as a determining referral authority, a permit is not required.

Specific exemptions may also apply to your registered place or object. If applicable, these are listed below. Specific exemptions are tailored to the conservation and management needs of an individual registered place or object and set out works and activities that are exempt from the requirements of a permit. Specific exemptions prevail if they conflict with general exemptions.

Find out more about heritage permit exemptions here.

Specific Exemptions:

General Conditions:

1. All exempted alterations are to be planned and carried out in a manner which prevents damage to the fabric of the registered place or object.
2. Should it become apparent during further inspection or the carrying out of alterations that original or previously hidden or inaccessible details of the place or object are revealed which relate to the significance of the place or object, then the exemption covering such alteration shall cease and the Executive Director shall be notified as soon as possible.
3. If there is a conservation policy and plan approved by the Executive Director, all works shall be in accordance with it.
4. Nothing in this declaration prevents the Executive Director from amending or rescinding all or any of the permit exemptions.
5. Nothing in this declaration exempts owners or their agents from the responsibility to seek relevant planning or building permits from the responsible authority where applicable.
