Statement of Significance

Last updated on - April 22, 1997

The Henty House (1953), also known as the Round house, is of state significance being one of the best known examples of the 1950s interest in simple geometries in form and plan amongst a small but innovative group of Melbourne architects. The Henty House's geometry fully exploits the views and topography of the prominent site.

The Henty House is also significant as its architect Roy Grounds was an influential and innovative practitioner of Modern architecture to Australia and its adaptation to regional conditions. The Henty House's location on the Mornington Peninsula places it amongst a number of houses of progressive design of the 1950s in this region. The Henty House is a crucial part of Ground's domestic geometric projects and buildings which also included triangular and square houses. These domestic geometric buildings informed the design of some of Ground's well known institutional buildings notably the Academy of Science Building in Canberra (1958 - 59) and the Victorian Cultural Centre in Melbourne (1959-81).

The Henty House is essentially intact although its visual prominence has been reduced by subdivision of the original site and construction of a house on this adjoining site.

The House is significant because:

1. The Henty House demonstrates creative accomplishment in the history of architecture in Victoria.
2. The Henty House is an extraordinary example of the architect Roy Ground's work.
3. The Henty house has strong associations with an important cultural group, namely progressive Melbourne architects of the 1950s.

Permit Exemptions

General Exemptions:

General exemptions apply to all places and objects included in the Victorian Heritage Register (VHR). General exemptions have been designed to allow everyday activities, maintenance and changes to your property, which don't harm its cultural heritage significance, to proceed without the need to obtain approvals under the Heritage Act 2017.

Places of worship: In some circumstances, you can alter a place of worship to accommodate religious practices without a permit, but you must notify the Executive Director of Heritage Victoria before you start the works or activities at least 20 business days before the works or activities are to commence.

Subdivision/consolidation: Permit exemptions exist for some subdivisions and consolidations. If the subdivision or consolidation is in accordance with a planning permit granted under Part 4 of the Planning and Environment Act 1987 and the application for the planning permit was referred to the Executive Director of Heritage Victoria as a determining referral authority, a permit is not required.

Specific exemptions may also apply to your registered place or object. If applicable, these are listed below. Specific exemptions are tailored to the conservation and management needs of an individual registered place or object and set out works and activities that are exempt from the requirements of a permit. Specific exemptions prevail if they conflict with general exemptions.
