What is significant?

The Studio, built in 1924 for Jessie Traill, at 7-13 Baker Road, Harkaway.

How is it significant?

The Studio is of local historic and aesthetic significance to the City of Casey.

Why is it significant?

The Studio is significant for its associations with the major Australian woman artist, Jessie Traill. Jessie was notable for her etchings, watercolour sketches and prints of the Australian landscape and grand-scale Australian construction projects. Jessie painted in her Harkaway studio and, in her last years, lived there. The Studio is intact and relates to the adjoining cottage built for Jessie and her sister Elsie in 1918-19. As well as earning a world reputation for painting and etching, and exhibiting in London, Paris and San Francisco as well as throughout Australia, Jessie worked as a nurse in France during the First World War, and was a life-long traveller. The Studio, retains its original use as an artist's studio, and its historical importance is enhanced by its secluded setting amidst native vegetation.

Physical Description 1

The studio building is reputedly constructed of recycled materials, (1) is a simple gabled building with half-timbered upper walls and weatherboard to first floor height. The roof form accommodates a balcony overlooking the former Traill house (now on the adjacent block), and is linked to an interior mezzanine. Overall the building retains a Bavarian character with the only minor alterations including a garage addition to one end, the annexing of a single room to the side, modifications to a ground storey wash room beneath the balcony and moving the stairs indoors. A pre-cast concrete chimney of the Pickering Flemington patent (common in Berwick buildings of the 1910s) features a sculpted keystone above the hearth. The Studio is sited on approximately 4046 square metres of land.
