Statement of Significance

Last updated on - February 11, 2005

A brick building erected to the designs of the Public Works Department of Victoria in 1889. A timber verandah with gables to each end faces the facade, extending beyond the gabled main body of the structure. Construction is in red face brickwork, enlivened by cream brick details and the roof is slate. The detailing of the main walls and the interior are of note.

The Court House is of note within the township of Wycheproof, has historical associations and is representative of this type of court house design. Exemplary of some six court houses in this idiom, all in this region and built in the same period, the court house also illustrates the logical end of the simple, classical revival court house forms evolved and developed by the Public Works Department during the nineteenth century.

It is in fair to good condition and is largely intact.
