VHR history

The schooner Albert ran onto a bank in west channel at the entrance to the Gippsland Lakes. Attempts were made to lighten the Albert, but it capsized and broke the mast. The vessel was eventually righted, but went to pieces shortly after. The shifting sand banks of the original entrance to the Gippsland Lakes often proved to be dangerous to shipping. The schooner Albert ran ashore in 1874 while crossing the bar and was soon a total wreck.
